Description

Boissier, the renowned Parisian confectionery house with a 200-year history, is famous, among other things, for its iconic fruity "ball candies." Its success is also due to its packaging and its forward-thinking marketing, offering superb boxes to complement its sweets. For example, here is a sycamore travel trunk with studded leather straps, commemorating the Armistice of the First World War, featuring a brass plaque engraved with the Allied flags. How could anyone resist the temptation to treat themselves to some sweets in such a case? Shipping in France and internationally, contact me for terms
