Description

Persian Lilian Rug - Iran Dimensions: 1.47 × 1.97 meters Period: circa 1930 Material: hand-knotted wool Condition: very good overall condition - Beautiful shades and natural patina of colors. Lilian (Persian: ??????) is a village in Khorram Dasht Rural District, Kamareh District, Khomeyn County, Markazi province, Iran. This superb Persian Lilian rug is an authentic piece made entirely by hand using traditional techniques. Dating from around 1930, it bears witness to the great craft tradition, renowned for the robustness and decorative richness. The central field is dominated by a large diamond-shaped medallion richly decorated with stylized floral motifs, harmoniously arranged around a lighter central medallion. The whole rests on a deep blue background, beautifully contrasted by shades of brick red, ivory, beige, and touches of brown, creating a composition that is both dynamic and balanced. The wide, finely decorated borders, composed of continuous floral motifs and plant scrolls, elegantly frame the central decoration and reinforce the visual structure of the rug. The high-quality wool is dense and supple to the touch, ensuring both comfort and durability. Over time, the colors have acquired a highly sought-after patina. Contact me for sales details.
