Description

Large posthumous portrait, oval print with added highlights, c. 1860 by Walery. It depicts an elderly woman, seated in a red velvet armchair, her eyes closed. She wears a black dress and her lace cap is encircled by a wide blue ribbon. Stanislaw Julian Ostroróg (1830-1890), known as Walery, is famous for his portraits of figures such as Queen Victoria and Victor Hugo. Active in France and England, he opened studios there which were taken over after his death by his son, who retained the Walery name. Active in France and England between 1860 and 1890, he opened studios there which were taken over after his death by his son, Lucien, who retained the Walery name. Portrait photographers (like Disdéri, Nadar, or the Walerys) often retouched faces to smooth wrinkles, add color to cheeks or
