Description

19th-century Asia: Statue representing Guanyin, the bodhisattva of Compassion, finely carved from an ancient hard stone with a beautiful honey patina. The figure is depicted standing, wearing long robes with flowing, deeply carved folds, holding a ritual vessel (kundika), a symbol of purity and benevolence. The face, with its serene and introspective features, expresses a great gentleness, typical of Chinese Buddhist iconography. The sculpture is distinguished by its remarkable quality of carving, harmonious proportions, and precise work on the hands, drapery, and headdress. The whole rests on an ancient carved wooden base, probably added later, ensuring stability and enhancing its beauty. Characteristics: Subject: Guanyin (Goddess of Compassion) Origin: China Period: Late 19th -
