Description

A pair of Empire period armchairs, dating from the early 19th century, crafted in mahogany, elegantly illustrating the restrained architectural vocabulary of the Napoleonic era. The armchairs rest on tapered front legs terminating in carved sabots, typical of the Empire style. The straight armrests with solid supports lend the whole a majestic yet balanced appearance. The rails and seat rails are richly adorned with finely applied, chased gilt bronze mounts, providing a refined contrast to the warmth of the wood. The backs and seats are fully upholstered in beige damask fabric with floral motifs, highlighted by a gilt-studded braid, offering optimal comfort while respecting the original aesthetic. Features: Origin: France Period: Empire, early 19th century Materials: Mahogany, gilt bronze Upholstery:
