Description

Elegant Napoleon III period wedding globe, presented under its original glass dome resting on an oval blackened wooden base. The lower part is decorated with gold tinsel depicting various flowers, complemented by wax flowers, the whole framing a small bevelled oval mirror surmounted by a dove. The bridal crown, bouquet and brooch are preserved on a blue silk cape, worn and faded by time, as is often the case with this type of piece. The upper part features a decoration composed of gold foil in the shape of flowers and leaves, ending at the top with a gold dove wearing the crown of peace, a symbol of unity and purity. The orange blossoms on the crown, bouquet and brooch are made of wax, in accordance with 19th-century custom. This globe comes from a collector's collection of 13 globes
