Description

Elegant late 19th-century French writing desk, crafted from fine solid oak. The piece features two front drawers with original knobs and a leather-inlaid writing surface, framed by a refined wooden molding. The turned legs end in original castors, a practical and decorative detail typical of French furniture of the period. Its well-balanced proportions and understated elegance make it a versatile piece, suitable as a writing desk or as a centre table in a study or a classic living room. A charming piece that reflects the high level of French craftsmanship at the end of the 19th century, perfectly suited to both traditional and eclectic interiors.
