Description

A sublime Louis XV giltwood wall console, circa 1750. This exquisite wall console, crafted from molded and carved giltwood, dates from the Louis XV period. It rests on cabriole legs joined by an openwork stretcher. The console, with its curved front and sides, is topped with a beautiful white marble slab with gray veining and a corbelled edge. Richly carved with shells, scrolls, acanthus leaves, and florets, it rests on four cabriole legs, also carved. The legs are joined by an openwork stretcher centered with a stylized shell. This piece is of exceptional quality, with refined and elegant lines. This console table combines practical utility, allowing you to display your art objects, decorative items, and timepieces, while also offering a superb visual appeal with its delicate and harmonious curves.
