Description

Gilt Iron Wall Flower Holder/Shield - Italy, First Half of the 20th Century. This elegant gilt iron wall shield, most likely of Italian manufacture, dates from the first half of the 20th century. This decorative piece is distinguished by its refined ornamentation and the quality of its metalwork. The structure consists of an openwork basket forming a receptacle, surmounted by a prominent decoration of symmetrical scrolls and tendrils, rising to a slender central motif reminiscent of a stylized vase or a floral blossom. The whole is harmoniously balanced, typical of Italian decorative taste, blending classical tradition with neo-Baroque elegance. The antique gilding, intentionally patinated by time, offers subtle nuances and lends the object an authentic charm, ideal for a distinctive wall decoration: entryway,
