Description

The oil on canvas represents a view of the town of Frascati with plains and mountains in the background. A natural woodland landscape, with tall trees, acts as an architectural backdrop, while in the foreground there are boulders and earthy paths. In the center there is a gathering in which two characters, dressed in popular but colorful clothes, are dancing; around them other figures are observing them, some standing and some sitting on the grass. The blue sky is slightly veiled and creates a color contrast with the palette used to create the tree branches and the earthy landscape in the background.
