Paris: the love of the most beautiful woman in the world, Helen. The scene harmoniously blends mythological symbols with Flemish pastoral aesthetics: architecture and dense foliage in the background, refined costumes, gentle expressions, and a gallant atmosphere typical of Northern workshops in the 17th and 18th centuries. The warm palette is dominated by ochres, foliage greens, muted blues, and pinks. Some drips and variations in color are visible in the upper part. There is localized wear to the weave in light areas and around the figures. There is slight loosening of the weave, but overall stability is satisfactory for its age. The composition and colors are well preserved.
