Description

An important two-part Louis XV style buffet in solid ash, of fine quality craftsmanship, featuring a richly carved front and an elegant antique patina. The upper section opens with three molded and shaped doors, highlighted by panels with flowing contours and delicate carved motifs. It is embellished with a molded cornice with clean lines, lending balance and presence to the whole. In the center, a finely carved open niche adds rhythm to the composition and provides a display or serving space. The lower section consists of three matching doors, accompanied by three drawers in the frieze, fitted with original handles and knobs. The whole rests on a shaped plinth, giving the piece a beautiful visual foundation. The carved decoration is present without excess: elegant moldings, discreet
