Description

An important two-part Renaissance-style buffet in solid walnut, remarkable for the quality of its carving, the balance of its proportions, and the richness of its decoration. The upper section is distinguished by an architectural composition, framed by turned columns and surmounted by a molded cornice with projecting sections, giving the piece a noble and imposing presence. It opens with two glazed side doors, with finely turned uprights, offering a beautiful view of the interior, and a central panel carved with exquisitely delicate floral and vegetal motifs. In the center, a deep open niche, perfectly integrated into the whole, adds rhythm and functionality, ideal for displaying tableware, decorative objects, or showpieces. The lower section features three solid doors, including a richly carved central door
