Description

Oil on canvas: 42 x 33 cm. Signed lower right E. Lawson and on the back of the canvas. Antique 17th-century carved wooden frame. Ernest Lawson, an American Impressionist painter, was a prominent member of the "Eight," a group of artists committed to challenging the academicism imposed by the National Academy of Design. This collective distinguished itself by its desire to promote a freer and more contemporary artistic vision. Primarily known for his landscapes, Lawson drew inspiration from Alfred Sisley, a master of Impressionism, as well as from the American John Henry Twachtman. His style is characterized by a thick, energetic brushstroke, accompanied by chalky tones that give his works a vibrant and unique texture. In the last years of his life, Lawson settled in Florida, near Miami, a
