Description

Superb and rare early 19th-century ceramic three-light chandelier. This striking chandelier, with its elongated shape, resembles a large bouquet of flowers. The base, richly colored, is shaped like a bouquet of white daisies topped with a cup of numerous colorful flowers. It comprises three wrought-iron light arms, each surmounted by a yellow and green painted metal cup. The entire piece is supported by a long stem simulating ribboned foliage, terminating in a ball of daisies. A high-quality, highly decorative piece in good condition, not electrified.
