Description

This seascape oil painting was created in Paris in 1857 by the renowned Swedish master Simeon Marcus Larson (1825-1864). It dates from the artist's most accomplished period and offers evidence of his standing as the preeminent Swedish practitioner within the Dusseldorf School tradition. The foreground depicts a Swedish fishing vessel navigating through windswept turbulent waters along a picturesque rocky coastline dissolving into a light haze. In the middle and far distance we also see fishing vessels in the midst of the fishing season. The composition reveals not only romantic emotionality with meticulous attention to the finest details, but also a complex multi-layered color palette with subtle transitions of light and shadow creating depth and spatial dimension to
