Description

Carved wooden head of Christ, attributable to 18th-century Italian religious sculpture. The face is depicted with a bowed head, half-closed eyes, and a half-open mouth, in keeping with the traditional iconography of the suffering Christ. The hair and beard are carved in a continuous, wavy pattern. The surface features a uniform dark patina. The back shows more rough workmanship, with evident gouge marks, consistent with an original intended frontal view. The base is cut, indicating separation from a full-body sculpture or crucifix.
