Description

Francesco Zonghi Lotti (active in the first half of the 20th century)

Winter Landscape, circa 1950s, oil on canvas laid on panel.

The painting depicts a winter landscape characterized by a snow-covered ground crossed by a stream and a sequence of bare trees arranged along a horizontal line. The composition is structured through a perspective that guides the viewer's gaze into depth, while the controlled use of color and painterly texture effectively defines the natural surfaces and vegetal elements.
