Description

This rosewood and palisander secretary desk, dating from the late 18th century, perfectly embodies the elegance and refinement of period furniture. Its harmonious design and noble materials make it an exceptional piece, ideal for a distinguished interior. The upper section of the desk opens with a drawer, while the lower section consists of two doors, providing access to a discreet yet practical shelf. In its center, a drop-front, covered in sumptuous red leather, unfolds to reveal a series of seven finely arranged drawers, six of which are identical, as well as compartmentalized shelves, perfect for organizing documents and precious objects. The whole is enhanced by a Salernes breccia marble top, which adds a touch of nobility and authenticity. Finally, this piece rests on two small, cabriole legs at the
