Description

An elegant tripod pedestal table from the Napoleon III period, in ebonized wood, resting on three articulated horse-leg legs, richly adorned with chased bronze mounts. It features two circular trays: the upper tray, encircled by an openwork gallery of chased bronze, embellished with a decorative chain forming three garlands; the smaller middle tray, centered by a sphere of ebonized wood. The trays are inlaid with precious woods decorated with floral motifs, including rosewood, lemonwood or sycamore, thuya, boxwood, and ebony, demonstrating the meticulous craftsmanship characteristic of the Second Empire. The upper tray holds in its center a painted plate depicting a maritime voyage scene: a ship flying French colors, an anchor dropped in the foreground, a mountain range in
