Description

These magnificent wall consoles date from the 20th century. They incorporate older elements, likely salvaged from other furniture or structures, giving them a unique charm and a fascinating historical character. Crafted from painted wood, they are decorated in an off-white hue, subtly enhanced with touches of blue. These shades accentuate the curves and carved details, creating the illusion of marble work on the upper surface. Their refined aesthetic evokes the craftsmanship of a bygone era. The consoles feature carved scroll motifs, typical of the Baroque and Rococo styles. These details suggest that some of the carved parts originated from older furniture, perhaps from the 18th or 19th century. The scrolls and vegetal ornamentation recall the influence of classical European art, where organic and elegant
