

Hungarian-style Officer's Saber - Restoration Period, Circa 1820

4 900 EUR

Signature : Solingen

Period : 19th century

Condition : Bon état

Description

The hilt is made of silver-colored metal, featuring an elegant crossguard with short quillons, a chain guard, and a finely chiseled lion's head pommel, a traditional symbol of authority and command.

The ebony grip is adorned with two lozenge-shaped inlays, one silver and the other gold, positioned on opposite faces--a refined detail characteristic of a quality weapon intended for a high-ranking officer. The grip exhibits some old cracks, but no play or structural weakness.

The curved Solingen blade, with a fuller, is blued along its entire length and richly gilded, decorated with foliage and ornamental motifs.

The free-flowing, energetic vegetal engraving at the tip of the blade is typical of Restoration-era production, confirming a post-Empire date. The leather scabbard with metal fittings and two suspension rings is consistent with the weapon. The saber is elegant and well-balanced, representative of the taste of French Restoration officers, combining formal tradition with contemporary decoration, in excellent spirit of undress or town attire. Period: France, circa 1815-1825 (Restoration). Condition: Good overall condition. Wear and signs of age consistent with its age. Old, stable cracks to the grip. Gilding and blueing still clearly visible.
