Description

A Louis XVI period secretary desk in finely inlaid precious wood marquetry, featuring a superb geometric design centered on a rosette on the drop-front. The veneer displays refined frieze work, with contrasting borders and beautiful symmetry, characteristic of late 18th-century French furniture. The desk opens at the top with a drawer in an inverted cyma molding, and at the bottom with two doors, allowing for functional storage while maintaining great decorative elegance. The drop-front reveals a beautiful interior. Dimensions: 170 x 94 x 38 cm. The top is finished with a light marble slab, adding nobility and protection. The bronze keyhole escutcheons and handles are original or faithfully preserved. The patina is warm and even, highlighting the wood grain. Specifications:
