Description

This sculpture depicts a 19th-century Lombardy terracotta acroterion with a thick edge. The figure represents a theatrical mask. Symbolically, masks represent the immortality of the soul, deriving their eschatological character from the Dionysian mysteries associated with the world of theater. This iconographic typology was most widespread between the 2nd and 3rd centuries AD. Measurements: height 35 cm, width 38 cm, depth 21 cm
