Description

This vintage Spanish hand-knotted rug presents a richly ornamented floral medallion composition executed in wool, characterized by a saturated red ground enlivened with soft blues, olive greens, and warm ochres. The surface is densely patterned with repeating stylized floral and foliate motifs, arranged in a balanced, symmetrical rhythm that gives the rug both decorative presence and visual depth. A finely articulated border frames the central field, reinforcing the structure while adding contrast through tighter geometric detailing. The pile shows nuanced variation in tone, consistent with traditional hand-dyeing and age, lending the piece warmth and authenticity. The overall effect is decorative yet grounded, with a classical sensibility typical of Spanish regional weaving.

traditions influenced by historic Mediterranean and Moorish design language. Its scale, color richness, and intricate workmanship make it suitable as a focal textile within refined residential or curated design settings.

Artist Unknown Spanish workshop, mid-20th century.

Artist Details The rug was produced by an unidentified Spanish workshop, likely operating within a regional tradition known for adapting classical European and Moorish-inspired motifs into hand-knotted wool carpets. The design reflects skilled artisanal weaving rather than industrial production, with attention to symmetry, border articulation, and color harmony.
