Description

Juan Escoda Corominas presents a powerful oil on canvas composition depicting a bullring scene charged with movement and collective intensity. The painting captures the spectacle unfolding against an urban backdrop of compacted buildings beneath a dramatic, unsettled sky. Executed with expressive, textured brushwork, the surface is built from layered strokes that dissolve detail in favor of atmosphere and momentum. A restrained yet forceful palette of ochres, deep reds, earthy browns, and muted blues reinforces the emotional gravity of the scene, while passages of light cut through the darker tonal field to guide the viewer's eye. The composition prioritizes rhythm and mass over individual figures, evoking the visceral energy of public ritual rather than literal narration. Rooted
