Description

Eugène GALIEN-LALOUE (Galien Laloue 1854-1941) Oil on canvas, Hamlet with Well, Barbizon (3) This oil on canvas depicts a charming and poetic countryside scene: a hamlet with two farm women at a well, a subject the artist loved to paint in the purest Barbizon tradition. The painting dates from the 19th century, circa 1880-1900, and was brilliantly executed by the artist with the lively, luminous, and colorful touch so characteristic of his work. It is enhanced by a beautiful period frame of wood and gilt stucco. Signed with his pseudonym "A. Languinai" in the lower left corner. Dimensions: Canvas: 27 cm x 41 cm (size 6P) With frame: 45 cm x 59 cm Very good condition. On its original canvas. Frame shows signs of age (see photos). It has been cleaned and is therefore ready to be hung. Two other paintings by the same artist, signed with the same pseudonym and of the same dimensions, are also for sale in my gallery. Eugène Galien-Laloue, a painter of the Belle Époque, famous for his gouache views of Paris, painted numerous works under various pseudonyms to avoid the exclusive contracts that bound him. The painter is listed in the "Bénézit" dictionary as well as in the "Lesser Masters of Painting" dictionary by Gérald Shurr and Pierre Cabanne, the Dictionary of Painters in Montmartre by André Roussard, and the Catalogue Raisonné by Noé Willer, Eugène Galien-Laloue, The Triumph of Paris. His works are held in numerous public collections both in France and abroad, notably in the museums of Louviers, Mulhouse, and La Rochelle. Please note that I respond to all inquiries about my items.
