Description

A rare and elegant Art Deco pendant, dating from 1925-1935, perfectly illustrating the modern and decorative aesthetic of the interwar period. The setting is made of finely engraved transparent plexiglass, an innovative material widely used by Art Deco designers for its lightness and luminosity. The engraved motifs, inspired by stylized geometry, frame a richly detailed central floral composition. The decoration consists of mottled turquoise glass beads alternating with mother-of-pearl beads, arranged around a central mother-of-pearl cabochon. An openwork gold-plated metal filigree enhances the overall design, adding depth and refinement. A decorative and original piece of jewelry, representative of Art Deco through its combination of modern materials and a
