Description

Exceptional window with a transom, both in traditional stained glass, made around 1900. This is a large piece divided into two sections (door/window and transom: total height with transom 3.14m) sold with all its original frames and hardware. A magnificent example of craftsmanship, this window can easily be converted into a double door with a few minor modifications to the lower joinery. Another important feature: the transom can be independent and therefore installed as a decorative element in a completely different location than the French door, thus allowing for a multitude of solutions and interior design options. Original gilt bronze handle and cremone bolts, finely chased, in the Louis XVI style. This magnificent set is in good overall condition. Note
