Description

This mahogany veneer sideboard, dating from the early 19th century, is notable for its small size. It combines elegance and simplicity, characteristics of the Directoire style, distinguished by its clean, straight lines, offering a refined and elegant aesthetic. The minimalist details and straight legs of this sideboard perfectly illustrate this style. Featuring a wide drawer in the frieze and two lower doors, this piece offers ample storage space. The locks are functional and come with their keys and brass escutcheons. The mahogany wood used for this sideboard gives it a rich and warm tone.Period: Early 19th century.
