Description

An iconic piece from the Napoleon III era, this Parisian clock, known as the "Oeil de Boeuf" (Bull's Eye), features a hexagonal frame of blackened wood enhanced by brass inlays that lend it a unique visual richness. The white marble dial is adorned with blue Roman numerals painted on porcelain and surrounded by meticulously crafted bronze frames. A beautiful bronze frieze encircles the dial. The clock is distinguished by its scrolling brass inlays, colored mother-of-pearl, and tortoiseshell in the Boulle style. This decorative object combines exceptional craftsmanship and a refined aesthetic, characteristic of this period.Period: Mid-19th century. Excellent condition.
