Description

Peter Rostrup BOYESEN, Port View in the Snow, Oil on canvas board, 55 x 46 cm. This work depicts a winter port scene characteristic of the style of Peter Rostrup Boyesen, a Danish painter active during the first half of the 20th century. The composition offers a panoramic view of a frozen or snow-covered canal, bordered by quays and port infrastructure. In the foreground, pieces of wood are covered in snow, while railway tracks and buildings extend to the left of the composition. The artist has accurately rendered the effects of winter light on the snow-covered roofs of the warehouses and buildings lining the port. In the background, a crane provides vertical support to the scene. The color palette favors cool tones--blues, grays, and whites--punctuated by touches of reddish-brown for the building facades, creating a harmonious contrast. The whole is interspersed with yellow, characteristic of the atmosphere of industrial sites. The brushwork is lively and spontaneous, in the Nordic Impressionist tradition, capturing the misty atmosphere and the particular light of a winter's day. Peter Rostrup Boyesen is known for his Scandinavian cityscapes and harborscapes, which he executed with a particular sensitivity to atmospheric effects. This work testifies to his interest in everyday scenes and the seasonal transformations of the Danish urban landscape. The work is signed lower left. It is in good condition, with a few barely visible retouchings. It is offered in a modern molded and gilt frame, also in good condition. The title of the work and the artist's name have been added to the back in a different hand. The work can be viewed at the gallery (07240).
