Description

19th-century Asia: Bronze statue depicting a Chinese sage, likely a Taoist immortal, standing and wearing a long, flowing robe. The figure holds a pilgrim's staff in his left hand and extends his right hand in a symbolic gesture of blessing or teaching. The face is finely sculpted, with a long, flowing beard, conveying a serene and meditative expression. The surface displays a natural and even green-brown patina, indicative of the age and beautiful oxidation of the bronze. Late 19th century period. Traditional Asian work. Material: Bronze with natural patina. Decoration and symbolism: Figure of a Taoist sage/immortal. Attribute of the staff (knowledge, longevity, spiritual path). Calm and hieratic posture, typical of Chinese statuary. Condition: Good overall condition. Old, uncleaned patina. Wear consistent
