Description

Description This large hand-knotted Anatolian kilim rug was woven in wool and features a symmetrical geometric composition with a central field enclosed by multiple decorative borders. The design includes stylized floral and angular motifs typical of traditional Anatolian flatweave textiles. The color palette is grounded in earthy brown tones, complemented by ochre, rust, green, teal, and muted blue accents. Its flatweave construction allows for clear pattern definition, with slight irregularities that are consistent with handwoven production. The structure and motifs align with regional folk weaving practices from Turkey, where symbolism and geometry play a central role. Light age-related wear is present and consistent with use, without compromising the rug's overall integrity or visual clarity. Artist Artist
