Description

DescriptionThis mid-twentieth-century mixed media composition, attributed to the Circle of Hamed Nada, presents a dense symbolic scene rendered through layered pigment, textured surfaces, and subdued figurative forms. The work combines deep greens, oxidized blues, earthen browns, and dark crimson tones, creating a brooding, introspective atmosphere characteristic of Egyptian modernism of the 1950s-60s. The figures appear archetypal rather than literal, emerging from a fractured, almost geological surface marked by craquelure and tactile buildup. The composition balances vertical and grounded forms, suggesting ritual, myth, or psychological narrative rather than a specific event. The expressive handling of materials, restrained palette, and symbolic abstraction align closely
