Description

Royal Blue Beijing Chinese Rug - Beijing "Fine Antique", circa 1940, Wool on a Cotton Weave. This sumptuous Beijing Chinese rug, dating from the 1940s, embodies all the finesse and refinement of the great Chinese textile productions of the early 20th century. Entirely hand-knotted using traditional techniques, it immediately captivates with its deep royal blue, a symbol of nobility and timeless elegance. Its field is punctuated by a delicate floral pattern, offering a visual experience that is both soothing and sophisticated. The eye is naturally drawn to an exceptional central medallion, remarkable as much for its size as for its unusual design. This bold composition gives the rug a strong and balanced presence, while maintaining perfect overall harmony. The finely crafted borders feature swastika motifs (the Sanskrit word for "good fortune" or "well-being"). The motif, a crocheted cross, appears to have first been used in Eurasia 7,000 years ago, perhaps to represent the sun's movement throughout the day. The precise framing of the design highlights the quality of the craftsmanship. The subtle variations in wool and color, characteristic of hand-knitted rugs, confirm the authenticity of this antique piece and enhance its unique character. Both decorative and timeless, this Peking rug is a choice piece for an elegant interior, whether classic or contemporary. It will bring depth, character, and distinction to any space, while also representing a lasting decorative investment and a sound investment for antique rug enthusiasts.
