Description

A magnificent Art Deco sculpture by Demètre H. Chiparus, depicting a young woman crouching and reaching out to a perched parrot. Made of spelter with a double patina, it displays a superb contrast between the antique green patina of the flesh and the metallic patina of the drapery, typical of the artist's decorative creations in the 1920s and 1930s. The graceful movement of the figure, the delicate modeling of the face, and the precision of the details--notably the beaded headdress and the parrot's plumage--attest to a particularly accomplished craftsmanship. The piece is presented on its original brown and pinkish-hued marble veneer base. Very good overall condition. Dimensions: Height 37 cm, Width 50 cm, Depth 15 cm.
