Description

A mahogany corner bookcase from the Napoleon III period, of considerable height, topped with a richly carved pediment decorated with scrolls and flowers, typical of the mid-19th century. The upper section features an arched glass door opening onto several shelves with scalloped edges, ideal for displaying collectibles, books, or fine china. The glass-fronted cabinet is framed by molded uprights and surmounted by a flowing pediment, providing a strong decorative presence. The lower section is closed by a solid door, revealing additional storage space with corner shelves. The entire piece rests on small carved feet, ensuring stability and elegance. The wood has a beautiful warm patina, harmonious proportions, and the piece is both decorative and functional, perfect for a classic interior, a library,
