Description

Preparatory pencil drawing for a stained-glass window project, The Assumption of the Virgin, first half of the 19th century. The drawing is mounted on the back. There is a trace of the paper being rolled up along its entire height. The outlines of the future cuts are directly incised into the paper. The frame is recent but does not detract from the overall look; it is sturdy. It provides good protection for a fragile work, allowing it to be handled. The photos have been taken to minimize reflections. More detailed photos are available upon request. Delivery arrangements will be discussed due to the size of the artwork. Dimensions: 189 x 71 x 3.7 cm
