We present this spectacular antique solid walnut wardrobe, made in the mid-19th century in Italy, during the Louis-Philippe period.This wardrobe is extremely rare due to its large size and four doors. Free of excessive ornamentation, it is very simple and linear, with doors featuring square-framed panels. The sides feature the same square-framed decoration. The top frame, with its subtle geometric movement, is truly unique. The wood has a splendid hue that, combined with its linearity, makes it easily adaptable to both classic antique interiors and modern interiors where a distinctive element is desired. By examining each photo in detail, you'll discover that every construction element is compatible with the wardrobe's 19th-century era.The interior is divided into two sections: the right section
