Description

The E1027 adjustable side table by Eileen Gray is named after a secret code she created: E for Eileen, 10 for Jean (J being the 10th letter of the alphabet for Jean Badovici), 2 for B (Badovici), and 7 for G (Gray). Eileen Gray (1878-1976) is one of the most influential figures in the history of 20th-century decorative arts and architecture. Her works, now considered Art Deco and design classics, fetch record prices at auction. The E1027 is a re-edition of the table Eileen Gray designed in 1927 for her villa in Roquebrune. In 1924, in collaboration with the Romanian architect Jean Badovici, Eileen Gray began working on the E1027 house. Tasked with furnishing her home, she created this table, highly innovative for its time. Luxury gives way to simplicity and a functional form. The glass top is
