Description

Oscar Falguera depicts a mountain village landscape in oil on canvas, showing a compact group of buildings centered around a church within rolling terrain. The composition uses simplified architectural forms and layered hills to create depth, with distant blue mountains defining the horizon. The palette consists mainly of greens, pale stone tones, ochres, and muted blues, contributing to a balanced and coherent spatial structure. Brushwork is broad and controlled, prioritizing clarity of form over detail. Even lighting across the surface supports a stable, calm visual effect. The work reflects mid-20th-century European landscape painting, combining post-impressionist structure with a modern regional approach. Artist Oscar Falguera (birth year unknown) was a European painter known for
