Description

This elegant portrait is part of Jean-Gabriel Domergue's emblematic work from the early 1920s, a period during which the artist fully developed his recognizable style, dedicated to the representation of classy and stylized female figures. This elegant woman, depicted holding a fan, embodies the sophisticated and worldly feminine ideal that brought the artist renown in interwar Paris. The composition is distinguished by the refined elongation of the silhouette, the graceful bearing of the head, and the meticulous treatment of the accessories, all characteristic elements of Domergue's aesthetic. The supple modeling and subtle palette contribute to the atmosphere of chic and lightness inherent in his work. Condition: Good overall condition. The varnish is yellowed and cleaning is
