

PROANTIC
LE PLUS BEAU CATALOGUE D'ANTIQUITES

Pair Of Meiji Period Japanese Bronze Quail Attributed To Maruki Co

2 245 EUR

Period : 19th century

Condition : Bon état

Material : Bronze

Description

A fine quality pair of Meiji period Japanese bronze quail, one standing and looking to the left, the other preening its feathers, attributed to Maruki Co, late 19th century, standing on a wood base, apparently unmarked. Measurements: Height: Preening quail (excluding base): 10 cm (4 in) Standing quail (excluding base): 8.5 cm (3.3 in) Length of base: 29 cm (11.4 in) Depth of base: 11.5 cm (4.5 in) Condition: One issue found. The left leg of the preening quail has a break, only visible when the bird is gently rocked. If the bird was removed from the base, this could be easily restored. No other issues found. Shipping: NO HIDDEN COSTS: Shipping/Import: EU and North American customers, PLEASE NOTE: Our price for this item is delivered to your door, including

Dealer

Lefays

Fine, affordable, art and antiques with excellent customer service

Mobile : +44 7772174440

Hare Lane,

Chard TA20

all shipping and import costs (duty/tariffs, customs clearance fees, and VAT) but does not include US or Canadian Sales Taxes (if applicable), which may be charged at checkout or by customs at import. For other destinations, please inquire. Notes: The Maruki workshop, based in Sukiya Street, Nihonbashi ward, in Tokyo, produced fine quality bronzes and carvings during the Meiji period, exhibiting both domestically and internationally. References: See Christies, Auction 21922 Three Private Collections: Belgravia, Berkshire and Guernsey, 25 May 2023, lot 180.