Description

We present a compelling oil on wooden panel painting depicting Saint Sebastian, created in Italy between 1925 and 1930, a period associated with the Rationalist movement, and of significant artistic and historical interest. This work stands out for its modern and powerful interpretation of a sacred subject, combining spirituality with the formal research characteristic of the early 20th century. The depiction of the Saint is particularly striking: tear-filled eyes, together with a single arrow piercing the neck, create a scene of strong emotional impact. Notably, there is no expression of pain; instead, the figure conveys a calm and dignified acceptance of martyrdom. This choice gives the painting deep symbolic meaning and a rare expressive elegance.
