Description

Magnificent 20th-century finely carved wooden grandfather clock, inspired by the Rococo/Louis XV style. The elegant case is lavishly decorated with scrolls, shells, foliage, and rocaille motifs, demonstrating remarkable craftsmanship. The upper section is adorned with two sculpted cherubs in the round, framing the dial and adding a decorative and theatrical dimension to the piece. The richly ornamented dial, with enameled Roman numerals, is framed by finely chiseled bronze or gilt elements. The glazed door reveals the brass pendulum, emphasizing the verticality and elegance of the silhouette. The curved and undulating base rests on a sculpted plinth, perfectly balanced in its proportions. Material: carved wood (probably walnut or fruitwood) Period: 20th century Style: Rococo/Louis XV
