Description

A very large pair of glass apothecary jars, likely from Murano, circa 1920-1930. These large jars are enameled, gilded, and decorated with painted motifs of angels playing flutes and women surrounding cartouches bearing the names Crocus and Sublimato. Additional enameled floral decorations appear on the back of the jars and on the lids. There is some wear to the enamel decoration, and one of the lids has been restored. This imposing pair of apothecary jars was probably intended to decorate a pharmacy at the beginning of the 20th century. The gilding on both jars is exquisite and shimmers beautifully in the light. The set is truly magnificent, large, and highly decorative--beautiful and quite imposing objects! Dimensions: 63 cm high. We deliver and ship worldwide; please contact me for a precise
