Description

Decorative Italian maiolica charger designed by Luigi Stefano Cannelli and hand-painted in the Rampini ceramic workshop, Gubbio. Executed in tin-glazed earthenware and dated 2003.

The composition depicts a classical seaside scene with a woman and child, painted in a manner inspired by early Renaissance art, particularly the circle of Sandro Botticelli. The treatment of form and drapery gives the piece a refined, timeless quality.

The rim is finished with stylised Greek lettering used as a decorative reference to ancient literature.

A poetic fragment by Sappho, in the Italian translation by Salvatore Quasimodo, appears on the reverse.
