Description

Elegant female bust in white marble, made in Italy during the period between the 1920s and 1930s.
The sculpture stands out for its formal balance and the refined rendering of the face, characterized by delicate features and a short, understated hairstyle, attributable to the classical language of the Return to Order movement and the early influences of Italian Novecento. The modelling is sober and of high quality, with finely polished surfaces and careful marble workmanship.
The bust rests on a dark marble base, creating a harmonious chromatic contrast with the body of the sculpture.
Unsigned sculpture, as is often the case with commissioned works or cultivated production of
