Description

Saint-Clément Faïence Holy Water Font - Early 19th Century. Polychrome faïence holy water fonts, fired using the low-fire technique, with a shape characteristic of this manufacturer. A hole in the top of the cross is associated with a ribbed cup and a pointed finial, and features a heart surmounted by a cross. The others have a seven-lobed shape forming a "shell." Some are reproduced in the reference book (see photos). They are all restored except for the first one, which is intact. No. 2: numerous chips on the cup and a restored chip near the suspension holes. No. 3: a restored chip on the cross, yellowing of the glaze. No. 4: broken in two and glued back together at the cup. They can be sold individually at EUR70 for the polychrome ones, EUR35 for the white ones. They can be sold individually:
